

Congratulations to the Daniel Morgan Graduate School of National Security Class of 2020. This year has been more challenging than many other years in history and it has shown us that adversity not only builds character, but also reveals character. You've admirably demonstrated who you are by triumphing in completing your education at DMGS, despite the difficulties COVID-19 has imposed upon you, your families, and our great nation. We don't know what the future holds, only that change will be constant. National security is all about our strength in dealing with unknowns that may threaten us, now or in the future. Your resilience will carry you through the uncertainty inherent in your chosen careers; and the leadership and technical skills you've honed as part of your DMGS education will provide the tools you need to act. For you, future challenges will be opportunities. I wish you all great success and Godspeed as you head toward your next destination in life and know that the future of our national security is in excellent hands: yours.
